To save Pete and PJ from the pirates, you've gotta be Goofy.

Pete and PJ thought it was a beautiful day for fishing on Spoonerville Island. That is, until Keelhaul Pete and his band of pirates caught them. Now Goofy and Max are off to the rescue through 5 puzzling, pirate-filled levels of castles, forests and caves. With your help, they'll make it to the pirate ship where Keelhaul Pete awaits and make him walk the plank.

The orange pads are key to Goofy and Max making it through the knight.

Even cowboys get toothaches. And in the Wild West days, this was the kind of chair they'd end up in. What's scarier is most dentists weren't even real doctors. They were barbers, butchers and even lawmen making extra money on the side. Or worse—like Doc Holliday, one of the gunfighters at the Wild West's famous O.K. Corral gunfight.

Doc was a gambler who pulled people's teeth when he was low on betting cash. Word to the wise: Avoid cavities and Adventure On!

Name: Ian Liddel

Age: 14

Cool Factor: Won the World Frisbee Championship in Orlando, Florida.

It All Began When: "My dad and a few friends play Frisbee golf, and they opened a store selling disks and stuff. I started playing more and eventually played tournaments."

Directions to a World

Tournament: "You go to a regional tournament where you compete in different events: accuracy (throwing Frisbees through a target), maximum time aloft (throwing a Frisbee in the air, calculating the hang time, and catching it with one hand), distance (throwing Frisbees as far as you can), Frisbee golf and freestyle."

Time Spent

Practicing: "I

play Frisbee a few hours a week and I practice distance about an hour every day."

Competition

Highs: "Meeting people and having fun. We went to Universal Studios, go-cart riding and amusement parks."

Competition Lows:

"The hours. We got up at 7 every morning. A couple of times we practiced all day until dark."

Big Win: "A $1,000 savings bond, a bunch of Frisbees and disks, a couple of shirts and a couple pairs of shorts. I'm saving the money for a car."

Best Move: "I spin the Frisbee on my hand, then I do an under-the-leg tap, then I turn around, kind of jump over the Frisbee, and do a little somersault and catch it under the leg."

For Good Luck: "I have a special hat: my Metallica hat. I wear it backwards."

Dream Job: "Playing disk golf for a living and making good money."

You don't have to wait 'til Halloween to see a movie with flying witches, a talking cat named Binx and 900 pumpkins.

Hocus Pocus is showing at movie theaters right now and features the very cool 11-year-old Thora Birch.

D.A.: What was the best part about being in this movie?

THORA: Flying! They strapped a harness on me and I went zooming around the soundstage. I want one of those flying things in my house. I'd grab my little brother and go flying into the kitchen!

D.A.: Who do you think is the greatest witch of all time?

THORA: The bad witch in The Wizard of Oz.

D.A.: Are you allergic to cats?

THORA: No, I have seven cats and a dog in real life. There's one cat, Binx, in the movie, but they used nine cats to play the part.

D.A.: Did you have fun filming in the witch town, Salem, Massachusetts?

THORA: It was really freaky. We went to a witch museum, and we saw pictures of witches and warlocks who were hanged.

D.A.: Are you superstitious?

THORA: No. Not

at all. The only thing I wonder about is Friday the 13th 'cause sometimes on those days, I mess up. You know, I trip or fall, and then I wonder if the day had anything to do with it.

D.A.: Is Halloween your favorite holiday?

THORA: Nope. My favorite is Christmas, 'cause I get presents, then my birthday, 'cause I get a year older, and then Halloween.

D.A.: What was your best Halloween costume so far?

THORA: My pirate costume! I had really weird earrings, a sword and wore lots of makeup. It was great!

Mutant Madness is everywhere. Not only are Marvel's X-Men celebrating their 30th anniversary, but they're now a top Saturday morning show. While you're waiting for the all-new fall episodes, here are some X-facts:

- X-pensive: The most valuable X-Men comic is The Uncanny X-Men Number 1. First published in 1963 with a cover price of 12¢, it's now worth $2,400!
- X-tensive: X-Men Number 1, published in 1991, was the biggest-selling comic of all time—about 7 million copies were sold.
- Longest X-planation: Through the years Jean Grey has been known as Marvel Girl, Phoenix and Dark Phoenix, but now she's back to just plain Jean Grey. She's also been impersonated by an alien force. Even worse, while everyone thought Jean was dead, her clone married Jean's boyfriend, Scott. Finally, there's the new Phoenix, who's Jean and Scott's daughter from a future that may never happen.

- No X-planation: Rogue's real name has never been revealed.
- X-tra stuff: Collect these X-episodes on video: "Night of the Sentinels," "Enter Magneto" and "Deadly Reunions." Also, look for these special issue comics: The X-Men Survival Guide to the Mansion, with info on where the X-Men hang, and The X-Men Anniversary Magazine, with interviews of X-creators.

Ever skip a chore, trip a friend or slip a frog into your sister's bed? Then you may have the makings of a Menace. Take this quiz to see if you belong in The Hall of Trouble.

1. The phone rings. It's a wrong number. You:

a) politely inform the caller that they've dialed incorrectly.

b) burp out "Wrong number!"

c) tell them the person they're calling is currently residing at Folsom State Prison.

2. Your mom asks you to take out the trash. You:

a) decide to scrub under the sink while you're at it.

b) say, "OK" and keep reading X-Men.

c) put the trash under your sister's bed.

3. For your Halloween costume, you dress as:

a) Peter Pan.

b) Homer Simpson.

c) yourself. There's nothing scarier.

Curly Sue

CURLY SUE

No one can beat Curly Sue's street smarts. She and her guardian Bill scam people to survive. Once she whacked a car with a stick so the wealthy lady who was driving would think she'd hit Bill.

Dennis the Menace

DENNIS THE MENACE

He's the one, the only, never-to-be-duplicated Master of Menace: Dennis the Menace. Whether he's banging a drum at 5 a.m. in Mr. Wilson's living room, making a list of people to bite when his teeth grow back in, or sticking snakes in Margaret's face, Dennis is the menace by which all others are measured.

Ferris Bueller

FERRIS BUELLER'S DAY OFF

No one ditches school like Ferris Bueller. First he eats at the most expensive restaurant in town. Then he goes to a Cubs game and catches a ball. He even "shakes up" a parade, all the while outwitting his principal and convincing the entire city that he is deathly ill.

4. Your teacher gives you detention. You:

- a) are sure this will ruin your life.
- b) use the time to catch up on the exploits of Wolverine.
- c) appreciate the chance to see all your friends in one place.

5. At the movies, you feel a big wad of gum stuck under your seat. You:

- a) run to the bathroom and wash the germs off your hand.
- b) pretend to put it in your mouth and chew it.
- c) stick it on the bald head of the guy snoozing in front of you.

6. While playing baseball, you hit a line drive right through your next-door neighbor's front window. You:

- a) 'fess up and offer to do yard work to pay for the damage.
- b) run home and turn on the TV. Baseball? What baseball?
- c) try to hit a line drive through the other front window so they'll match.

7. There's a new kid on the block. You:

- a) ring his doorbell. When he answers, ask, "Will you be my friend?"
- b) ignore him.
- c) tell him all the cool kids wear underwear over their jeans.

8. Paper is best used as:

- a) something to write on.
- b) something to make paper airplanes out of.
- c) spit wads—especially to spit at your neighbor's prissy poodle.

9. At Thanksgiving, you:

- a) help set the table.
- b) watch football and win burping contests.
- c) pass out articles on the unsanitary conditions of turkey slaughter houses.

10. The first day of school, you:

- a) get excited.
- b) get depressed.
- c) get sick.

11. The last day of school, you:

- a) look forward to summer camp.
- b) stay home, like any Friday.
- c) started your summer vacation a month ago.

12. The babysitter tells you to go to bed before your usual bedtime. You:

- a) go to bed. Extra sleep is good for you.
- b) read trashy comics under the covers 'til way past midnight.
- c) snag the portable phone and call Japan. The next day ask your parents who the sitter was talking to on the phone all night.

Kevin McCallister

HOME ALONE 1 AND 2

Burglars beware! If you mess with this kid, you will be punished. He's a master at traps that slam, topple, staple and tar-and-feather unwanted guests. Kevin's a loner who'd rather watch TV and order giant sundaes on his father's credit card than go on a boring family vacation. Sure Kevin gets into mischief, but like he says, "Don't we all?!"

MENACE-O-METER SCORE: 33

Tom Sawyer

THE ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER

Tom's a classic menace. He plays tricks, ditches school to go swimming, torments his brother, and hates work more than anything else. Once he pretended painting a fence was so fun, his friends paid him to let them do it. Tom can't decide whether he'd rather be a pirate, an Indian or a soldier, but he knows he'd rather be "an outlaw for a year in Sherwood Forest than President of the United States forever."

Junior Healy and Trixie Young

PROBLEM CHILD 2

Only one word describes these kids—obnoxious! The duo lets everyone else know that they're boss. They've taped the class bully to the blackboard. They've started a food fight—with their principal. They've even "invited" a few hundred roaches to dinner.

MENACE-O-METER SCORE: 40

Calvin

"CALVIN AND HOBBS"

He's just one point away from being the ultimate menace.

Calvin's weapons of choice are water balloons and snowballs, most often directed toward his neighbor Susie. When he's not wrestling with his best bud Hobbes, a stuffed tiger, Calvin pretends his gacky dinner is eating him, imagines his teacher is a space mutant, and surprises his mom with questions like, "If we were cannibals, what parts of people would we eat?"

MENACE-O-METER: 41

Bart Simpson

"THE SIMPSONS"

Scramble the letters in Bart's name and you get Brat, with a capital B. Yes, Bart Simpson is the major mischief-meister. Remember the time he stole Grandpa's false teeth and then tried taping them back together? How about when he set snakes loose in Springfield? And who can forget the time Bart pretended to be trapped in a well just so he could get on national TV? If Menace was a country, Bart would be the president.

- b) ask, "Are we there yet?" every five miles.
- c) hold a sign up in the back window that says "Help! I'm being kidnapped!"

14. It's time to dissect a frog in science class. You:

- a) identify every part of the frog from memory.
- b) refuse to do it because you're an animal-rights activist.
- c) sneak a live frog in and pretend your "dead" frog came back to life.

Now it's time to add up your score. Here's how:

For each circled a), give yourself one Menace point. For each b) answer, 2 points, and for each c), 3 points. Add up your points and you'll know just how menacing you really are.

MENACE-O-METER

14-23 points: You're a clean-cut kid. If anyone calls you a geek, just write them a five-page report explaining why they are wrong.

24-33 points: Definite Menace potential. Daring, but not dangerous.

The Wild West was full of thieves looking for the easy life. But every outlaw knew there was someone hot on the trail—whether it was a lawman or a bounty hunter. Then came the showdowns and the shootouts. Here are some legendary stories.

LAWMAK AND LAWBR

THE WILD BUNCH
AND THEIR LEADERS:
THE SUNDANCE KID
(FAR LEFT) AND BUTCH CASSIDY
(FAR RIGHT).

BUTCH CASSIDY AND THE SUNDANCE KID

Their mamas knew them as Robert Parker and Harry Longbaugh. They and their gang, The Wild Bunch, rustled cattle and robbed trains until they disappeared into South America in 1901. A detective agency tracked them, but they were never caught. A 1969 movie showed Butch and Sundance dying in a shootout, but no one really knows their fate. Some people think they became farmers in Wyoming!

EYE SPIES

You've heard of the FBI and the CIA. But do you know "The Eye"? That's what Wild West criminals called the granddaddy of detective agencies, run by Allan Pinkerton and his band of "private eyes."

Pinkerton's methods were very clever.

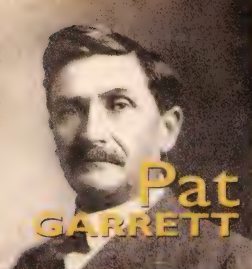

Once, after a bank teller was murdered, he had a man who looked exactly like the dead man follow the main suspect, Drysdale, everywhere. Drysdale couldn't take the "haunting" and finally confessed.

There were some things that even Pinkerton couldn't do, like nab Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. But he never stopped trying. He once wrote, "I do not know the meaning of the word fail."

Belle

JESSE JAMES This tough guy once called off a robbery because he had a toothache! When he felt better, he and his gang held up anything that moved. The only thing he liked more than a clean getaway was reading about himself in the papers.

ROBERT FORD In 1881, Ford heard of a $5,000 reward for the capture of Jesse James and decided to turn him in. Ford found James living under the name "Mr. Howard," and shot him in the back. Ford was then known in a popular song as the "dirty little coward who killed Mr. Howard."

BELLE STARR Belle "Bandit Queen" Starr robbed and stole her way through Oklahoma territory. She was the first woman tried and convicted of horse-stealing—a serious crime in the West.

JUDGE ISAAC PARKER He was sent to clean up an Oklahoma town nicknamed "Robber's Roost" because so many outlaws lived there. He was tough as nails, but Belle Starr always caused him grief. Good lawyers and lack of evidence always kept her from being convicted. When she was caught red-handed stealing a horse, Parker finally put her in the slammer.

BILLY THE KID At age 15 he was running from the law. He stole everything from laundry to cattle and escaped from jail four times. Some say he shot 21 people—a grisly Wild West record. The number was more likely closer to four, but his violent reputation lives on.

PAT GARRETT Garrett's mission in life was to catch Billy the Kid. Garrett finally tracked him down on July 14, 1881, and shot him in a neighbor's bedroom.

BILL DOOLIN AND THE DALTON GANG The Daltons—Robert, Emmett and Gratton—were one-time lawmen who decided with Doolin that they'd make more money as outlaws. In 1892, they tried to hold up a bank in Coffeyville, Kansas, and the townsfolk blasted them out of town—literally. Only Emmett survived. Doolin wasn't there—he was running from U.S. Marshall Bill Tilghman.

THE OKLAHOMA GUARDSMEN Bill Tilghman, Chris Madsen and Heck Thomas were U.S. Marshalls who spent most of their time chasing the Daltons and Doolin. Thomas cornered Doolin in 1896. Doolin aimed, fired and missed. Thomas didn't.

and even American Indian.

TRUE-LIFE

We have Mexico to thank for giving us cowboys. In the 1700s—way before white men rode and roped their way to cowboy legend—Mexican vaqueros were masters of the saddle. Vaqueros were hired to work on the huge Spanish ranches in Mexico and Texas. Around the time of the Civil War, these guys headed north and got jobs as cowhands on the huge American cattle drives.

Vaqueros weren't the only ones learning the tricks of the cowboy trade—lots of American Indians were trained by Spanish missionaries to herd, rope, drive and brand cattle. In the late 1800s many of these cowboy Indians settled in Indian Territory (now Oklahoma) and worked on ranches. Some cattle ranches were a great shot—and bragged that he had scars from 14 bullet wounds. Later he became really famous as a rodeo star after he won a riding, roping and shooting contest in Deadwood, South Dakota.

PONY EXPRESS

Problem:
How do you deliver mail from Missouri to California through rugged desert and plains lurking with wild animals and angry American Indians? The Wild West answer: The Pony Express.

Most Pony Express riders used the Santa Fe saddle—it was cheap ($15), sold everywhere, and was a perfect fit for the mochila mail bags.

The Pony Express was set up like a huge relay race. A rider carried a bundle of mail 75 to 100 miles to a station, then passed it to the next waiting rider. Each rider had to gallop furiously to make the fastest time possible. As dangerous as the job was, hundreds of boys applied to be Pony Express riders.

Like Billy Campbell—he didn't know from danger. The 18-year-old adventurer was looking for money and a good time. He got a good time—and more adventure than he thought. One dark night he got completely lost in the wilderness.

PONY EXPRESS RIDERS WEREN'T SUPPOSED TO WEIGH MORE THAN 125 POUNDS OR BE UNDER 20 YEARS OLD. BUT MOST RIDERS WERE 18, WITH THE YOUNGEST BEING 14.

XPRESS

He was able to make his way back to a trail by throwing one end of his rope into a river to see which way the water was flowing.

AT TOP SPEED,
A PONY EXPRESS
RIDER COVERED
HIS 100 MILES
IN 6 TO 8
HOURS.

Another night, wolves chased Billy and his horse, hungry for either one of them. Later, Billy solved this problem by leaving poisoned meat on the trail.

Billy's ultimate adventure came right after Abraham Lincoln was elected president. The Pony Express was the only way news of Lincoln's inauguration could get to the West. Billy carried this news for over 100 miles, through an enormous blizzard that almost killed him.

Billy and the other riders managed to carry more than 30,000 pieces of mail across the West because the Pony Express was the only game around—until the telegraph took over. Even a racehorse couldn't beat the telegraph's lightning-fast electric messages. A year and a half after the first rider raced to his station, the Pony Express came to an end.

POSTAGE FOR THE

ROUGH RIDERS

If you think Billy had it tough, check out how some other riders lived up to the Pony Express motto: "The Mail Must Get Through."

Elijah Nichols Wilson

Elijah's route ran through American Indian territory. On one run he got caught in the middle of a fierce battle between two tribes and was shot in the skull with an arrow—just above his eye. He managed to survive, but he wore a hat for the rest of his life to hide the scar.

James Butler Hickok

As a Pony Express station manager, James made sure no roughnecks bothered his station. When he got into a shoot-out with a gang that was bothering him in Rock Creek, Nebraska, he earned his nickname "Wild Bill" and started his reputation as the fastest gun in the West.

Boston Upson

His route was a 55-mile stretch through the Sierra Nevada Mountains—not an easy trail, considering there was no trail. Boston once fought a blizzard with 60-mph winds and huge 20-foot drifts. He walked the last three miles when his horse couldn't get through the snow and he still made it in a record eight hours.

William F. Cody

Pony Express riders loved to break distance records, and William was one of them. At age 14 he rode 20 hours—nonstop—to cover an unbelievable 322 miles. This was the beginning of "Buffalo Bill" Cody's career as an adventurer and Wild West showman.

"WILD BILL" HICKOK

ANNIE OAKLEY

AND THE WILD WEST SHOW

Stepping up to the stage, a tiny, 5-foot-tall woman confidently raised her gun. Several yards away, Crown Prince Wilhelm of Germany stood sideways, a cigarette dangling from his mouth. The woman took aim. Bang! The cigarette flew out of Prince Wilhelm's mouth as the bullet hit it. The crowd cheered as sharpshooter Annie Oakley took her bows.

By the 1880s, the Wild West was pretty tame. So in 1883, "Buffalo Bill" Cody, a western hero, hired real cowboys and American Indians and took Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show on the road. The show had it all: roping, riding, broncobusting—even a fake buffalo hunt. But the showstopper was Annie Oakley.

Annie learned to shoot when she was 8 years old. At 15 she entered a sharpshooting contest and beat Frank Butler, a pro marksman. Instead of getting mad, Frank married her. Nine years later, they joined Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

In one of their favorite tricks, Annie shot a dime out of Frank's hand. In another trick, Frank would stand 90 feet away and throw a playing card into the air for Annie to shoot. She never missed. That's how she earned the nickname "Little Sure Shot."

Hey.

MC<sup>2</sup> and I are trapped in the A-ZONE. We were busy working on our bug collections when it suddenly started raining. Hard. Unfortunately, we didn't see it coming. We're stuck up here with no umbrellas and a leaky roof. Blubb's down on the ground laughing. He has this stupid umbrella with big smiling frogs all over it.

Laugh it up, Blubb-man. See, I have this friend with this really cool job. He's a cloud seeder. His job is to create rain in areas that need it. I just might talk to him about doing Blubb's room. To read more about the water wizard, see Page 52. Meanwhile, I'll answer some of your questions.

Why do we need our tonsils and appendix?

Kaitlyn Dynes, 8
Kearny, New Jersey

I call them useless body parts because you can easily live without them—and most people do. But some researchers say these parts help make white blood cells, which fight infection in the body.

Some scientists think that these organs soak up infection like a sponge, so that other critical organs aren't infected. That could be why your tonsils and appendix get infected so often compared to other parts of your body.

How do woodpeckers peck at trees and not get head injuries?

Vinny Mansueto, 11
Port Jervis, New York

Woodpeckers are the ultimate headbangers. They peck at trees with their bills to get to the yummy bugs inside.

Here's how: Their bills are not attached to their skulls! There's a little space in between 'em with muscles that act as shock absorbers. So they can bang their beaks pretty hard without harming themselves at all. Flying wood chips aren't a problem either, because woodpeckers have incredibly thick skulls. (Kinda like Blubb.) They even have extra-narrow nostrils so the chips can't fly up their noses.

Why do some ladybugs have spots and others don't?

Bet Mormino, 11
Ontario, California

Some people think you can tell a ladybug's age by counting its spots. Other people think only female ladybugs have spots. They're all wrong.

Get this: There are more than 5,000 different kinds of ladybugs! Some species have red, yellow or black spots, while other species don't have any markings. Different spots mean you're looking at different kinds of ladybugs.

It's finally stopped raining. I'm gonna make a phone call and see about redesigning Blubb's room. Wonder if my rain maker buddy can create tornadoes?

'Til next month, play hard and think deep.

“Our pilots do everything that ordinary pilots are trained to avoid!”

Keith Brown is standing in the open door of a plane 20,000 feet above Earth, flare gun ready. Instead of avoiding the huge, dark cloud up ahead, Keith's pilot flies directly into it. Keith shoots his gun filled with rain-making chemicals into the blindingly thick mist and the pilot steps on the gas. They rush out of the cloud before the thunderstorm hits.

Keith is a rain maker and in demand all over the world. Who hires him? Farmers who need rain for their dry land. Operators of hydroelectric power plants (generated by water). And paper makers and other industries that rely on water.

Some places call Keith even though they don't seem to need rain—like the already rainy Pacific Northwest states. “They normally get 120 inches a year, so when they only get 90 inches they feel like they're in a drought,” he explains. “It's all a matter of how much rain you get used to.”

His rain-making magic is in his special gun. By shooting tiny particles of a chemical called silver iodide into clouds, Keith increases the chances that the clouds will produce

rain man

rain. (See box on Page 54 for how this works.) Keith claims he can cause up to 15 percent more rain each year. And people are willing to pay big bucks for that—from $100,000 to more than $1 million for a program of six months of cloud-seeding.

There are 102 silver iodide flares attached to the belly of this Cessna 340—bombs away!

The most surefire way to get the chemical where it's supposed to go is to fly it in by plane. Unfortunately, this way is also the most dangerous. The freezing rain droplets release heat that can cause the whole cloud to explode. Keith has been in planes that were dented after being pelted by marble-sized hailstones.

"Our pilots do everything that ordinary pilots are trained to avoid," says Keith. This includes flying smack into the heavy turbulence of rain clouds. "You have to let the plane get carried along the updrafts and downdrafts, even though it's scary. Sometimes the plane turns completely upside down!"

Once Keith got

When the silver iodide particles hit the cold, damp air in the cloud, tiny drops of water cling to the particles and freeze. The frozen droplets keep getting bigger, until their weight carries them to the bottom of the cloud. After a while they melt and fall to the ground—and it's raining!

SUMO

Wrestlemania

Would you chuck college and a major basketball scholarship to study—sumo wrestling? Chad Rowan did, and now he's one of the few Americans who has become a sumo wrestling star in Japan. At 23, he's not just a star—Akebono (Chad's Japanese name, which means "sunrise") is the first non-Japanese in the sport's 2,000-year history to achieve sumo's highest rank: yokozuna. →

SUMO Power

It may not be WWE, but sumo wrestling is Japan's hottest sport. The rules are easy: Two huge men (wearing mawashi belts—they look like diapers!) try to push each other out of a ring that's 15 feet across.

The first thing you notice about sumo wrestlers is that they're, well, big. Really big. They gain weight by eating pounds of rice and a special dish called chanko stew, made of seafood, veggies, chicken and tofu. They've been known to wolf down a few hamburgers, too. They sleep a lot, especially after eating, so the weight will pile on.

"When I was in high school, I barely passed with mostly D's," Hawaiian-born Akebono says. When he got to college he realized he was only in school for basketball, and that didn't seem to be working out, either. Then he met a sumo master named Azumazeki, who thought Akebono would be good at sumo wrestling. So Akebono decided to move to Japan to study sumo.

Akebono didn't speak a word of Japanese. "I was so homesick that I cried like a baby the first six months I was in Japan," he says. He didn't have a clue about how hard the life of a rikishi (a beginner) would be.

As the new wrestler on the block, Akebono had to clean toilets, cook rice and take nonstop teasing from 15-year-old wrestlers—even though he was 18—who had seniority over him. He spent long, hard hours in wrestling practice, and even though he's 6-foot-8 and weighs about 466 pounds, he got pounded—a lot.

"I didn't like getting beaten on," Akebono says. So he decided the best way to get better was to eat, sleep, breathe, speak and think in Japanese. He learned to fight back with a killer double-handed thrust, and he perfected a chilling glare that scares the diapers off his opponents.

When wrestlers get good enough to be noticed, the fan mail starts pouring in. Wrestlers answer it by dipping their hands in ink and mailing handprints to their fans. After a couple years of being a rikishi, Akebono had won enough tournaments to start getting fan mail himself. When he was awarded the rank of yokozuna, he got a fan letter from President Clinton!

Yokozunas are "something close to gods" in Japan, Akebono says. He'll get a whopping $15,000 a month salary, along with some off-the-wall prizes—a year's supply of gasoline, a year's worth of beer, 10,000 eggs and 3,700 pounds of rice. Not bad for a guy who, if he hadn't become a wrestler, would "probably be a bum on the beach in Hawaii," he says.

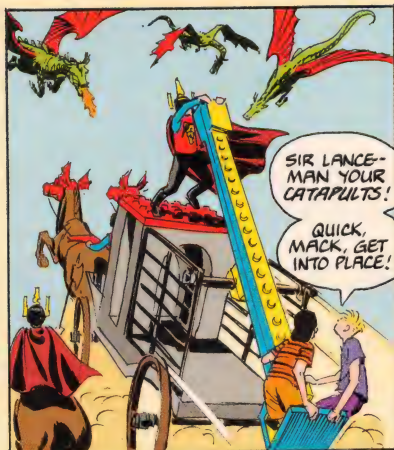

—David Bowman

There's only been 63 yokozunas in the last 350 years. Akebono's win makes him number 64!

IT MAY BE A DREAM JOB, but don't be fooled—batboys have more to do than just hang out, watch games and get autographs. "We worked 84 home games last year, before the Series, and that's a lot," Darren says. The batboys (usually three) do some major work, like:

Supply players with water, Gatorade and towels. "The guys can drink gallons, so we keep two huge coolers—one in the dugout and one in the pitchers' dugout—filled all the time," Darren says. "We also fill containers with bubble gum and sunflower seeds for the guys to chew on," he continues. "They go through more than 200 pieces of gum and 25 bags of seeds a game."

Keep bats in order. "Every player has his own bat rack with two to six bats in it, so we have to keep up with who's using which bat and put bats back after a play is over. The team owns 100 bats, and every player picks out the bats he'll use in a game," Darren says.

Chase foul balls down left field. "Fans really want to get those foul balls, and they'll yell at us to throw them the ball after we've picked one up," Darren explains. "There's no way we can do that—we'd be giving away tons of balls."

Make sure the umpire always has a spare ball. "Umpires keep about six balls at a time in their pockets, and when they get down to three I take them more. We go through about seven dozen balls in each game," Darren says.

Polish the catcher's gear and the players' shoes and helmets after the game. "This isn't as bad as it sounds," Darren explains. "There are maybe 30 pairs of shoes and 20 helmets to do, and all three batboys pitch in. I'm usually the one to wipe down the catcher's gear, too."

Warm up the left fielder between innings by pitching to him. "I tried out for the job by throwing some balls, because a big part of the job is warming up players," Darren says. "During the Series we got to shag—help the batters warm up by catching and throwing balls back. We weren't supposed to be out there, but they let us. It was very cool."

MAKING THE GRADE: Mint may make your breath smell fresh, but in card-collecting-land it means your cards are the freshest! Serious collectors use a grading system for their cards to see how much they're worth. See how your cards stack up to this grading system:

MINT (M): Perfecto! All edges and corners are sharp, gloss is perfect, picture is centered and there are no printing defects.

NEAR MINT (NM): The card may have only one teeny flaw, like very minor wear on one edge, ever-so-slight gloss loss or uneven borders.

EXCELLENT (Ex): A card that has more than one teeny flaw, but still looks sharp.

VERY GOOD (VG): This card has been around the block a few times. Corners and edges are dulled and some gloss has worn off. But the card has no deep creases or tape or writing on it.

GOOD (G): A card in Good condition doesn't look so good—in fact, it looks worn out, with minor scuffing, layering and rounding.

FAIR (F): Looks like you've been using it as a bookmark: scuffed, dirty, bent, round corners, rough edges.

POOR (P): Looks like your kid brother gave it to the dog for a chew toy. Stay away!

So how to stay Mint? According to experts, cards should be stored in a cool, dry, dark →

Mint condition.

Printing flaws such as ink spots reduce a card's value.

Beware of uneven borders!

place, like under your bed or in your closet. Cardboard boxes are OK, but don't let the cards slide around. Putting rubber bands around your cards is an absolute no-no—the result is called “notching” and it's as bad as it sounds.

Handle your cards as little as possible. If you want to be able to look at your treasures, use plastic sheets with pockets made for cards and put them in binders. Single card holders are also available. Be careful when you are sliding them in so the edges don't get damaged or frayed.

Several companies make cardboard boxes just for storing cards. If you're serious about keeping your collection in tip-top shape, you might want to check out what's available down at your local card store.

Now, check out the '56 Hector Lopez below. What's wrong with this card? Just about everything! This card has seen more action than Hector did when he was with the A's. How many defects can you find?

1. Ragged border.

2. Scratches.

3. Scuffing.

5. Rounded corner, plus a crease.

4. Dirty border.
